Human Community and Common Values in the 21st Century

July 5-6, 2023
Fu Jen Catholic University, Taipei, Taiwan
Human Community and Common Values in the 21st Century

人類共通體與21世紀的共同價值

2023/7/5-8
Common Values in the 21st Century

Human Values in the 21st Century

Wong Cheon
Katia Lenehan
Tran Van Doan
John Selvamani
Transhumanism could lead to:

1. A new form of inequality, as those who can afford technological enhancements will have a significant advantage over those who cannot.
2. A loss of human connection, as people become increasingly reliant on technology and less reliant on each other.
3. A loss of meaning and purpose in life, as people become obsessed with self-improvement and forget about the importance of living in the present moment.
4. Threats to individual identity and autonomy as technology begins to alter or enhance human faculties, the line between the biological and the artificial may blur, raising significant questions about personal identity, authenticity, and humanity.
5. The commodification of the human body as technological enhancements become standard, raising ethical concerns about the nature of human enhancement.
Human Community and Common Values in the 21st Century
Bringing to Address Filipino Education

Ramos, Ph.D.
The contribution of Confucianism to the value system of literacy in Vietnam